The ProQuest database allows you to search for newspaper articles from across the state, the nation and even worldwide. You can search the entire database or search within a particular publication (for instance, the Star Tribune).

- From the main ARCC homepage, locate the link for library.
- Select Coon Rapids Campus.
- Under the Databases heading, select PROQUEST.
- ProQuest opens to a basic search screen which will search the entire database. To search within a particular newspaper, toward the top of the ProQuest main page, select Publications.
- Type New York Times in the search field (or whatever newspaper you choose).
- Select New York Times, Late Edition (East Coast)
- Type your search terms.
- To the right of your results list, refine your search by date either using the slide bar or entering a specific date range.
- Notice the links to related searches that pertain to your initial search (above the results list). Clicking any of these links will refine your search to narrow your results.
- You may print, email or cite your article of choice.
